The Naked Wine Show Now available on the web!

The Naked Wine Show starring Susan Sterling is now available on the web. Every Wednesday Susan delivers a fun, uninhibited review of a wine available in Ontario!

The folks at Slurpswish.com have put together an online video program called the "Naked Wine Show", and it's a fun, saucy, and sometimes cheeky way of reviewing wine.

"We're big fans of other wine review shows. Lots of times you see a review and the wine is not available, or it's sold out to collectors. We wanted to give Canadians a show where they could see a wine featured, and then go to the store or winery and buy it. We have no vested interest in the wine business; our sole interest is to inform and entertain" says Timothy Troke, executive producer.

The Naked Wine show will also feature movie and music pairings. If you're at home you can pick up the wine and see the movie we have suggested, or if you're out at the theatre, you'll know what to order when you go for a drink after the movie. The wine world has a stodgy, old-media reputation, and we wanted to take our viewers in a very different direction.

The Show stars Susan Sterling, a wine expert who also studied drama, and who brings a sense of fun and irreverence to wine reviewing. "We spent a lot of time trying to cast the right person, and we must have interviewed about 300 local sommeliers, wine experts and comedians to finally find Susan, says Tim, " She was literally the last person we auditioned".

The Naked Wine Show is directed by Matt Campagna, who co-directed the feature film "Six Reasons Why" starring Colm Feore, and who stars in his own hit Podcasts called BSGcast.com and YourGeekNews.com.

Last week Susan tried Wildass Rosé 2006 and paired it with the new spaghetti western "Six Reasons Why". She noted some candied strawberry, plus underlying note of herbs, and felt that it delivers on the palate.

This week Susan tries 2006 Six Foot Six Pinot Noir from Austins Winery in Australia.

SlurpSwish.com and The Naked Wine Show are still in beta mode. We welcome feedback and suggestions from our viewers. The fans will determine how the show and site will evolve over time. Once we have the wine show where we want it, then we want to expand the site to include other subjects. We have a few surprises up our sleeves, and this is not your mother's food and wine channel, although she would probably love it! Says Matt Campagna
